

"CHOCOLATE CITY" TRANSFORMED: GENTRIFICATION IN DC

Recently, Washington, DC has gentrified as rapidly as almost any city in the world. A panel of experts will engage the audience in a conversation about the causes of gentrification, the displacement of lower-income residents and gentrification's other effects, the racialized nature of gentrification in what's long been proudly known as Chocolate City, and efforts to build alternatives to gentrification.

Panelists

Amanda Huron (University of the District of Columbia)

Derek Hyra (American University)

Samir Meghelli (Smithsonian Anacostia Community Museum)

George Derek Musgrove (University of Maryland, Baltimore County)

Brett Williams (American University)

October 14, 10:30 am - 12:30 pm

Anderson Hall Room 6J